

Bordering the Dyle Valley wildlife area in Muizen, the Baarbeekhoeve is a historical farmstead dating back to 1800. It was remodelled and renovated with respect for the original elements of the building and using natural and ecological materials. The building boasts two rooms, both affording a wonderful view of the surrounding fields. And both are equipped with a beamer, flip chart and whiteboard.

Ooievaar (Stork): a 130-m² room on the ground floor with kitchen, coffee bar and counter. The large windows flood the space with natural light and bring the outside in (and provide a view of the many storks).

Zwaluw (Swallow): an intimate, 130-m² room on the first floor, finished with warm materials like wood and loam.
